Calvary

The trial of the day before took a heavy loss,
And Jesus could not carry the rough wooden cross,
Yet, from the crowd, Simon came, to save our Saviour's face,
To bring for Him this burden to the final resting place.

The sun was hot that morning when Jesus staggered along
People mocked his every step although he did no wrong,
And still the crowd was angry, when he was unjustly tried,
The path was rough and cruel with nowhere he could hide.

The soldiers offered wine to drink but this He did not do,
So, they crucified Him there and then and split his clothes in two,
As it tells us in the prophets that this will be fulfilled,
So, we are sure the word of God, is, as He has truly willed.

From the sixth hour to the ninth, Jesus hung in agony,
Then cried, 'My God, My God, why, have you forsaken me?'
They ran and got some vinegar and put it on a stick,
Expecting Him to drink from this mocking, cruel trick.

When He gave up His Spirit as the perfect sacrifice,
The Temple curtain tore, on the paying of this price,
So, all the people of the world can worship Him each day,
As their Father and Redeemer, in a personal and blessed way.
